What to Know

The Pacers will be playing the full four quarters on Sunday, but they're expected to have things wrapped up well before that. They will fight it out against the Milwaukee Bucks in an Eastern Conference playoff matchup at 7:00 p.m. ET at Gainbridge Fieldhouse. The timing is sure in the Pacers' favor as the team sits on six straight wins at home while the Bucks have been banged up by four consecutive losses on the road.

On Friday, the Pacers needed a bit of extra time to put away the Bucks. They had just enough and edged the Bucks out 121-118. For those keeping track at home, that's the closest victory Indiana has posted against Milwaukee since November 9, 2023.

Despite the loss, the Bucks had strong showings from Khris Middleton, who dropped a double-double on 42 points and ten rebounds, and Damian Lillard, who scored 28 points along with eight assists and three steals. Lillard's evening made it three games in a row in which he has scored at least 30 points.

The Pacers are sitting pretty at the moment, as they lead the series with the Bucks 2-1. Check CBS Sports after the game to find out if the Pacers extend their lead or if the Bucks can claw their way back.
